

Editorial

This issue of philosophy @ LISBON is thematic, organized by Kátia Hay and Ana Carrasco-Conde. It analyzes a fragmented and posthumous work of Schelling, The Ages of the World (1813) and corresponds to a Seminar held at the Faculty of Letters of the University of Lisbon.

We can now announce that one of the next issues will be equally thematic, dedicated to the work of Marx. But it is also our intention to publish in the year 2018 a regular number.

In this way, we started today a call for papers with the deadline of September 30, 2018.

As usual, the journal's thematic lines ('History of Philosophy', 'Language, Mind and Cognition' and 'Praxis') are open to all researchers. We recall that the Praxis area encompasses questions and issues related to Ethics, Aesthetics and Political Philosophy.
